James Kimak, of KimakDesign, and creator of the wonderful murals adorning the Phyllis and David Komansky Center for Children's Health, has received a 2007 Creativity Annual Award for the Komansky Center murals.

First launched in 1970, the Creativity Awards is one of the oldest and most well established graphic design competitions. Each year thousands of entries from firms of all sizes are submitted. Their list of winners includes the most prestigious agencies, design houses, and media creators from around the world. The yearly competition culminates with the publication of the Creativity Annual: a 400 page, full color hardcover distributed worldwide by Harper Collins.

Our congratulations to Jim. His murals have brightened up the lives of children, families, faculty, and staff at the Komansky Center and we are thrilled that his work has received such recognition.
